

MATH AND SCIENCE HELP (MASH)

Math and Science Help (MASH) is a part of the Academic Resource Center, and it provides support for undergraduate students through one-to-one peer tutoring and weekly group review sessions led by supplemental instructors for STEM courses.

MASH is designed to help students strengthen their technical understanding, improve problem-solving skills, and build effective study strategies that contribute to long-term academic success. Our services support students across disciplines, whether they're reinforcing foundational concepts or preparing for exams.

All tutoring is free for our Illinois Tech community. Tutors are available for pre-scheduled appointments available Monday through Friday during the spring and fall semesters. Appointments can be made by registering for an account at <https://illinoistech.mywconline.com>. Once registered, you can access a full schedule of available tutoring sessions and pick one that fits your needs. Drop-ins are also welcome! MASH is located on the upper level of the Paul V. Galvin Library.

You can visit the MASH webpage here for more information.
